

Rule-conditioned partial identification of latent public preference

No branch is a universal winner: empirical public preference remains latent, and coverage is scored only in registered known-truth simulations.